Father Ken's Notes

Fear Incarcerates.

Among the many marvelous wonders at the San Diego Zoo is the giraffe compound. Enclosed in what is called a natural habitat are several of these magnificent animals. They are every bit as tall and graceful as one might imagine. But they are far more massive and muscular than expected.

Tall somehow seems to imply thin. However, these great beasts are anything but skinny. Their necks are thicker and their legs shorter and more powerful than one anticipates. It is not difficult to see why one kick could send an ambitious lion packing.

Yet these massive, stately animals are enclosed in a small compound that seems far too restricting for their size and power, but no cage contains them. There are no bars or walls. There is but a simple, waterless moat, no deeper than the beast's knee, that circles the compound. Freedom is but a mere two steps away.

But they are trapped. All of them are. For not one of them will take the risk of stepping down and across for fear of breaking its neck. Every giraffe in the San Diego Zoo suffers from fear, which in life—incarcerates.

Father Ken

MARRIAGE

We extend our best wishes and congratulations to

Daniel & Megan (Beer) Barson

Sean & Kayla (Case) Keasey

Kevin Michael & Megan Joye (Bohatch) Collins

who were married this weekend.

May the Lord deepen their love for each other and bless them as they begin their life together.
